HISTORICAL CATALOGUE

OF THE

DEDHAM HIGH SCHOOL,

TEACHERS AND STUDENTS,

1851—1889.

PREPARED BY A COMMITTEE APPOINTED AT THE ANNUAL REUNION,
NOVEMBER, 1888.

PUBLISHED BY THE HIGH SCHOOL ASSOCIATION,
DECEMBER, 1889.

DEDHAM, MASS. :
PRINTED BY H. H. MCQUILLEN.
1889.

INTRODUCTION.

The Town of Dedham, at a meeting held May 12, 1851, "voted to instruct the Town's School Committee to hire a building and teacher, and establish a High School according to law."

Also, "voted that the sum of one thousand dollars be raised by tax for the purpose of establishing and maintaining a High School, to be expended by the Town School Committee."

In accordance with these votes, the Committee elected Mr. Charles J. Capen as Principal, and also hired the hall in which he had for several years taught a private school. This hall was on Church street, over the store of Mr. William Field, and was commonly known as Masonic Hall.

It was decided to admit to the school only such pupils as passed a satisfactory written examination. To show what standard of admission was set up, and what requirements the schools of the town were expected to meet, and also to preserve it as an educational curiosity, the entire list of the questions used in this examination is here given.

The school opened Monday, Sept. 15, 1851, and occupied Masonic Hall till September, 1854, when it was removed to the Town House on Bullard street. During the summer of 1855 a High School House was erected on Highland street, and was dedicated on the tenth of December. The school remained there nearly twenty-two years. The present High School House was first occupied October 3, 1887.

It is the purpose of this catalogue, so far as it is historical, to indicate the family ties, the occupations, and the residences of all who have been members of the school. As most of the facts concerning those who are still living have been obtained directly from the persons themselves, and as those relating to the dead have generally been supplied by their nearest relatives, it is presumed that the record is accurate. In a few instances, however, no information could be obtained; but it is hoped that all persons, who have furnished material for this catalogue by filling out the circulars, will find that careful use has been made of their valuable assistance. If errors still exist in the work, it must be excused on the ground that all human performances are subject to imperfections.

As it was not convenient to make any other classification, both the teachers and the students are arranged in the catalogue according to the years when they became connected with the School. The Post Office address is printed in Italics.

Chas. J. Capen.

TEACHERS.

CHARLES JAMES CAPEN, son of Rev. Lemuel and Mary Ann (Hunting) Capen, was born on Dorchester Heights, South Boston, April 5, 1823. In the Boston Latin School he fitted for Harvard College which he entered in 1840, graduating in 1844, and receiving the degree of A. M. in 1846. He became Principal of the Centre (now Ames) School, in Dedham, in 1844. In 1849 he opened a private high and classical school at the request of prominent citizens of Dedham who had failed to induce the town to establish a public high school. In the summer of 1851, the town having voted to establish a high school, Mr. Capen was appointed master of the same, and commenced his duties in September. In July, 1852, he received an appointment in the Boston Latin school, which he entered upon in September of that year, and, from that time to the present, he has taught there as sub-master and master. On account of the absence of the head master, he was acting head master from February to September, 1879; and as senior master he is now, October, 1889, in charge of the school during an absence of the head master. Mr. Capen married Lucy Richmond Seaver, April 26, 1848. Their children are Charles Lemuel, born February 9, 1850; Edward, July 14, 1854. Mrs. Capen died Dec. 17, 1881.
